The News, 10 October 2009

PESHAWAR: Forty-nine people, including a woman and seven children, were killed and 90 others injured as terror revisited the provincial metropolis within a fortnight when a suicide attacker detonated his explosives-laden car at the crowded Soekarno Chowk in Khyber Bazaar on Friday. The explosion occurred at 12:16 pm, exactly when a heated debate was going on in the NWFP Assembly, located a few hundred meters away from the bombing scene. The blast plunged the provincial capital into grief. Many cried after seeing the bodies of a little girl, Amna, and a woman being carried away from the spot. People volunteered to help the injured and retrieve the dead. Markets were shut down.

Car Bomb Kills at Least 41 in Restive Region of Pakistan

NYT, 12 October 2009

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan — A suicide car bomber attacked a military vehicle in a crowded market in northwest Pakistan on Monday, killing at least 41 people and wounding dozens more, police and hospital officials said. The explosion occurred at the Alpuri market, whose shops are adjacent to a police station and a mosque, in the Shangla District within the restive Swat Valley. Among the dead, according to a local police official, were six soldiers and four newly recruited members of a community police force. No one took immediate responsibility for the blast, although the blame is likely to fall on Taliban insurgents who have been active in the area. The Pakistani military had declared Swat District cleared of militants after an offensive this summer, and this was the most deadly militant attack in the region since the end of that campaign.

New Attack in Pakistan Targets Police Station

NYT, 16 October 2009

PESHAWAR, Pakistan — Suicide bombers attacked a police station that was holding a number of high-profile militants for interrogation in Peshawar on Friday, killing at least 11 people in the latest of a series of bold attacks against security installations in Pakistan, officials said. The wave of attacks has created new concerns that the country's array of militant groups, including the Taliban and Al Qaeda, are pooling their resources and planning in a coordinated attempt to bring down Pakistan's civilian government. The strikes have grown more sophisticated in recent months and have been carried out against even the most heavily guarded areas, including the national army headquarters in Rawalpindi on Sunday.

Pakistan Air Force Site Is Bombed

NYT, 23 October 2009

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan — A suicide bombing at Pakistan's premier aeronautical manufacturing complex killed seven people on Friday morning, the ninth attack on major government installations this month. The bomber blew up himself at the checkpoint at the entrance to the complex, 40 miles northwest of Islamabad, as workers arrived for the morning shift, said a district police official, Fakhur Sultan. Two men guarding the checkpoint and five civilians were killed, Mr. Sultan said. The Pakistan Aeronautical Complex at Kamra is the country's main air force maintenance and research hub, where engineers and workers build and overhaul fighter jets and radar systems.
